Possible strike 'not a step we would take lightly,' WSU faculty union says

Local News
By: Kristen Eskow

Posted: Aug 22, 2018 11:41 PM EDT
Updated: Aug 22, 2018 11:45 PM EDT

Wright State faculty union issues strike platform

FAIRBORN, Ohio (WDTN) - As a possible strike looms for hundreds of faculty members at Wright State University, a union spokesperson says compensation and job security have been among the key issues in negotiations with university officials.

Roughly 500 full-time teaching faculty members may go on strike October 1 if their union rejects a fact-finder report, according to union officials.

The American Association of University Professors (AAUP) at Wright State has been trying to negotiate a new contract with the university for the past year and a half.

Noeleen McIlvenna, contract administration officer for the AAUP at Wright State, called the negotiations process "tense."

"We just reached this point where you have to draw a line in the sand for the quality of education and for the students," McIlvenna said.

The union’s contract with Wright State expired in June 2017, McIlvenna said. The university's proposal includes benefits reductions and furloughs that add up to a nearly 10 percent pay cut, McIlvenna added.

Aside from better pay, union members also want more protections to ensure job security, McIlvenna said.

"It's just a little bit concerning because what's going to happen around campus?" said Jenna Powers, a Wright State University freshman. "Are they going to stop classes?"

"It's not shocking at all," said Leandra Cruzado, whose sister attends Wright State. "I feel like they should go on strike because it's affecting their families as well."

Both sides have met multiple times, as recently as last week, McIlvenna said. They've now turned to a fact-finder to try to resolve the dispute.
The fact-finder's report will be released September 11, and union members will have a week to vote to accept or reject it, McIlvenna said. A rejection could lead to a strike, she added.

"We know how the stakes are high for many people in this community," McIlvenna said. "And that we want them to understand that this is not a step we would take lightly."

A Wright State University spokesperson declined to comment during the negotiations in order to leave discussions at the bargaining table.
Latest News - Local

- Child hit by car, taken to hospital in Dayton
- Breezy & humid with chances of showers & storms
  An approaching warm front will bring in higher humidity, warmer temperatures and chances for showers and thunderstorms. A round of showers and storms should be mid to late morning across the Miami Valley and exit early this afternoon. There will be dry periods throughout the day. Winds will be gusty out of the southwest.

  Read More »

- Search continues for suspects in convenience store shooting
  According to dispatch, a store clerk was shot during a robbery and the suspect is still on the loose.

  Read More »

- Trooper involved in head-on crash
  Regional dispatch confirmed with 2 NEWS that a crash occurred around 8:50 pm on Friday in the area of Philadelphia Drive and Haverhill Drive.

  Read More »

- Medical marijuana clinic opens, patients still awaiting dispensaries
  That delay means that while patients can receive recommendations, there will not be any dispensaries open for them to legally buy marijuana.

  Read More »